Der Merkurstab. Journal of Anthroposophic Medicine

Der Merkurstab is the international journal for Anthroposophic Medicine, first published in 1946 in Stuttgart, Germany. While the rod of Asclepius relates more to the outer aspects of the healing process, the staff of Mercury (“der Merkurstab”) has stood for the more inner aspects of healing.

The journal publishes articles related to different disease processes, case histories taken out current medical practice, as well as scientific work, scholarly articles and case vignettes from anthroposophic pharmacy, non-medical therapies, and nursing care. It also includes updates on scientific and research projects, interviews, conference reports and editorials. The journal is put out by the Association of Anthroposophic Physicians in Germany and the Medical Section of the School of Spiritual Science, Dornach, Switzerland.

Anthromedics

Anthromedics is a professional online portal offering articles on anthroposophic medicine for physicians, nurses, and therapists, with information for outpatient practice, hospitals work and training programs.

Anthromedics is published by the Association of Anthroposophic Physicians in Germany (GAÄD) and the Medical Section of the School of Spiritual Science, Dornach, Switzerland.

Editorial work takes place in both Berlin, Germany, and Dornach, Switzerland. The editorial team in Berlin (www.merkurstab.de) is responsible for the online edition of Der Merkurstab and for content management of the entire portal, including rights and user administration for subscribers and editorial staff. The editorial team in Dornach is responsible for the content in the sections: Basic Concepts, Medical Disciplines, and Practice, and includes specialist editors, two copy editors, translators and an editorial board of doctors and therapists.

Vademecum of Anthroposophic Medicines

The Vademecum of Anthroposophic Medicines is the primary reference for prescribing anthroposophic medicines, with information related to outpatient, inpatient and training settings. It includes detailed information regarding the composition, available dosage forms, dosing recommendations and approved indications.

The project arose out of a detailed questionnaire which was shared internationally with anthroposophic physicians in 2006 and 2007. To date the process has gathered 2,300 reports from 274 doctors in 19 different countries. In the fourth edition 1,778 indications are presented, relating to 627 groups of medicines, accompanied for the first time with a systematic introduction and presentation of the therapeutic concepts which stand behind mistletoe therapy as well as other supportive medicines used for oncologic disease. The digital edition contains some 19,000 references.

Translations are available in English, French, Italian and Spanish.

Vademecum of External Applications

External Applications are an integral and reliable part of anthroposophic nursing care, often showing immediate and impressive effects. The Vademecum of External Applications provides an important resource for nurses and other medical professionals.

Ninety years of experience with poultices, compresses, Rhythmical Einreibungen and therapeutic baths has created a real treasure within the field of Anthroposophic Medicine and Nursing. The Vademecum is intended to serve as a practical manual while simultaneously collecting, preserving and publicizing these clinical treasures.

Free access to the Vademecum of External Applications is available online, in German, Dutch, English, French, Russian and Spanish versions.
